

First Announcement:

Symposium "Earth's Climate Change: Science and Impacts"

Serbian Academy of Sciences and Arts, Belgrade, Serbia, 11-13 October 2017

Climate change observation, and Earth system modeling, paleoclimate, limited area modeling, and climate change application scientists are kindly invited to a three-day symposium "Earth's Climate Change: Science and Impacts," organized by the Serbian Academy of Sciences and Arts, 11-13 October 2017, in Belgrade, Serbia. Following keynote talks by invited speakers, session will be held on what recent observations are telling us, Earth climate system modeling issues, lessons for the future we have from past climate, such as from the Eemian interglacial period, regional climate modeling, addressing Mediterranean / South-eastern Europe in particular, and climate change impact we can expect on vital issues of water, agriculture, energy, economy, health. Among others, keynote talks of James Hansen and Andre Berger are expected.

Following the symposium an excursion to the "Culture and Science Center Milutin Milanković" in Dalj, Croatia, is planned for interested participants, on Saturday, October 14, with an appropriate program. The Center is located in a renovated Milutin Milanković family home, now housing a variety of exhibits related to Milanković's life and work.

Please send information on your possible interest in attending the symposium by e-mailing to [climatechange2017(at)sanu.ac.rs] filled out preliminary registration form posted at the sooner the better, but in any case by July 1. Please cc contact persons indicated on the form. The deadline for submission of abstracts is planned to be August 15. There will be no registration fee. Further details will be posted in subsequent announcements.

<http://www.sanu.ac.rs/English/ClimateChange/Home.aspx>

It would be appreciated if you share this information with colleagues that you expect might be interested in attending the symposium. With thanks for your attention, and hoping to welcome you in Belgrade,

The Symposium Organizing Committee, Belgrade, March 3, 2017